

Can produce distribution warehouses be certified organic if they are repalletizing produce containers that are not impermeably sealed?

Any entity handling organic product must safeguard the integrity of that organic product. Distributors are not required to be certified, but must comply with various requirements under the NOP regulations (205.272, dealing with commingling for example). Entities that choose to voluntarily become certified should read the applicable NOP regulations for handling operations and contact a USDA-accredited certifying agent.
